Things to Do and See in Italy in September 2018

John Bensalhia | Thursday, August 30, 2018 - 11:31

John Bensalhia sees in the Autumn as Italy events take in – amongst other things – the movies, hot air balloons and sporting challenges...

With Autumn kicking in, there's a contrast in this month's crop of Italian festivals. On the one hand, there's a nod to various means of communication – explored in a special dedicated festival, and also through the power of cinema. On the other, there's an emphasis on sport and exercise, with some great stamina-building contests.

So let's kick off the new season with a spectrum of events that will appeal to everyone from movie buffs to food connoisseurs!

Festival della Comunicazione

Camogli, 6th - 9th September 2018

Once upon a time, we communicated through telegrams. Then telephones. Today, however, there are many more outlets for communication, thanks to the modern marvels of technology. Current communication methods through media and web language are marked at Camogli's Festival della Comunicazione.

The Communication Festival enters its fifth edition this year, bringing together the cream of social media experts, journalists and famous faces in this field. It's a festival that's open to all ages, with children being able to enjoy specially prepared workshops that will open their minds to the possibilities afforded by modern communication means.

This year's theme is 'Vision', with visionary ambitions realised in inventions, scientific discoveries, art, music and writing – the ultimate methods of communication.
